FMC UPDATE

The Academy of Media and Theatre Arts is a nonprofit organization dedicated to the teaching and production of media and theater work for and by young people. Many AMATA graduates have continued their training at the university level, and some have gone on to work in film and stage productions. Saturday, June 1, in Bldg B at 1pm, AMATA presents their showcase of students in creative drama, beginning acting, and beginning and intermediate musical theater. At 3pm the student showcase will include advanced acting, acting for video and a performance company in acting and musical theater. This would be an excellent time for those interested in enrolling in the summer session July 8 to become more familiar with AMATA. 776-4720

The Media Alliance Photographers Group presents "From Here to There: Photographs of Youth and Age" in the Fort Mason Center Lobby, June 4 through 28. Seventeen artists are represented with color and black and white photos from around the world—from North Beach to Brooklyn, Nicaragua to Canada, Norway, Italy, France, India and China. The Group brings together professionals interested in traditional documentary photography: communicating a story or an event with personal vision. They have monthly meetings with guest speakers, organize exhibits and educational programs, and publish a free alternative gallery directory for the Bay Area, listing unusual places where exhibits can be presented. For the directory, or for information about the Photographers Group, contact Media Alliance (441-2559). The Lobby exhibit in Building A may be seen Monday through Saturday, 9am to 5pm. 441-5706

Raft California Enjoy a Sierran whitewater river while contributing to environmental protection. Friends of the River is the leading conservation organization in California dedicated to protecting our remaining freeflowing waters and conserving our energy supplies. Join them in bringing preservation to national attention with exciting river rafting, June 20 or 21, and other dates throughout the year. 771-0400

Festival Of The Sea presented by the Golden Gate National Recreation Area at the National Maritime Museum's Hyde Street Pier. Surrounded by the museum's historic ships, performers of traditional sea music will bring alive the music and dance of the 18th and 19th century men of the sea. Park Ranger Nettell recreates the lives of 19th-century sailors for hundreds of school children every year. Other performers will bring their songs of whaling and women at sea with traditional fishing and sailing songs of Canada and Washington. Representatives from the Italian and Portuguese communities will also be on hand to present song and dance of their countries. It's a colorful and vivid musical voyage back in time to the seafaring lives of centuries past. June 15 and 16. Call 556-0560.

9th Annual Spring Folk Music Festival This free event is very much a do-it-yourself festival. Everyone is encouraged to bring their own instruments, voice and dancing feet and actually take part in the festival events. There will be workshops for various instruments from guitar to harp as well as various singing and song styles. Irish dancing, concerts, and great food will entertain you all day at one of the largest folk festivals in the country. Mayor Dianne Feinstein proudly proclaimed June 9-16, 1985, as Folk Music Week in San Francisco. Join the fun June 15-16, Buildings A and C. 661-2217

Give Peace A Dance This second annual event will be held June 22 from noon until midnight in Pier 2. The 12-hour fundraiser, co-sponsored by Nuclear Weapons Freeze and Committee In Solidarity With The People of El Salvador, will feature six live bands, theater skits, professional dance acts, celebrity emcees, local comedians, and other surprises, all to be broadcast live on community radio station KPFA-FM. Participating marathon dancers solicit sponsors for each hour spent on the dancefloor. Dance registration is now underway; call 864-5110.

THE WELCOME MAT

Jule Anderson has enough plans to fill several lifetimes, and enough energy to accomplish them all. Her love of involvement, and intensity of commitment, are immediately apparent. As a Black, and a woman, she was raised to believe that "you've got to do better than anyone else to succeed. Maybe people have forgotten to say that enough. You can never reach perfection, but you have to try."

A long-time member of the African-American Historical and Cultural Society, Jule has been a Board member, Vice President, President, and, since February, Executive Director. She is working seven days a week, temporarily unpaid, trying to stabilize the Society's financial situation. "I didn't realize how nonprofit a nonprofit organization really could be. We need a fairy godmother or father from somewhere."

AACHS came to Fort Mason Center after losing its home in the Western Addition to Redevelopment. Although some feel that this location is not convenient for many of the Society's Black members, the visibility of the programs and exhibits to more non-blacks is a plus. "If our programs are good enough, and are publicized enough, people will come. We have to get the word out, because the programs are excellent." The Black Literature workshops on Saturdays, for example, are well-attended.

Jule has been teaching Black history for over twenty years, at AACHS, and as a volunteer for the public schools. The mother of three grown children, now divorced, she became involved in the problems of education in an urban setting. She was PTA president, director of the Reading is Fundamental program, vice president of the volunteer Education Auxiliary, on the Youth and Education Committee of the San Francisco Human Rights Commission, and, from 1978 through 1982, a member of the San Francisco Board of Education. She also found time to earn a Master's degree in City Planning from UC Berkeley. Jule hopes someday to combine her commitment to education with her training in city planning, believing that the planning process does not include enough concerns about education, yet profoundly affects it.

Fundraising plans for AACHS include a summer day camp, called "Origins"; an oral history project, including classes on collecting techniques; a program on 49 Bay Area Black women, age 49 or older, "worth their weight in gold"; family folklore classes; rental art exhibits; and expansion of the gift shop. Jule would like to open the shop and gallery in the evenings, but first needs more staff and volunteers.

Jule, who plans to make her first visit to Africa this summer, loves to quote African proverbs. The one that seems to suit her best is "When spider webs unite, you can tie up a lion." Lions—beware!

CAPITAL CAMPAIGN STUDY BEGINS WITH GRANT FROM HEWLETT FOUNDATION

The first steps of Fort Mason Center's proposed Capital Campaign for Renovations may now begin, thanks to a $25,000 grant awarded by the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation. With this grant, a feasibility study will be done to establish fundraising objectives, and a strategy for achieving them; a prospectus will be produced, describing the capital projects to be accomplished during the next five years; and professional counsel will be hired to assist in the initial phases of fundraising. The Capital Campaign will focus on raising the funds necessary to complete the renovation of Fort Mason Center's nine buildings. It will ensure that the Center will continue to serve the diverse community which produces over 15,000 events each year, and will provide a model for the country for the conversion of surplus or under-utilized buildings to productive use.
